Free Bulbs With Early Orders

If you wish to take us up on our offer of Free Bulbs, it will be well to send your order in very soon and before bulbs go under N. R. A. control, for although bulbs come normally under Agriculture and not under the N. R. A., yet there is a strong effort on the part of a number of growers to have a code adopted by the N. R. A. covering bulbs. And in the proposed code there is a provision prohibiting overcount and free bulbs. It is our belief that any orders received before N. R. A. takes control may be filled as formerly, but that orders received after the adoption of the code will have to then comply with the code and N. R. A. rulings.

Please don't forget to use the attached Coupons. We have been able to propagate some of the very finest varieties quite rapidly and we shall be glad to include some of them free with orders as per the offer on the Coupons. Use whichever Coupon fits the size of your order and mark or check items selected. With present low prices, now is a fine time to invest in the best varieties and build up a stock for the future, for the outlook is that bulb prices will be higher another season.

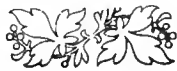

Each year we are going stronger on Ellis Originations and growing less of other varieties. If you could only see the many fine letters that we have received from appreciative growers who have had such wonderful blooms from Ellis seedlings you would soon realize, as we do, that we should have gone stronger on these years ago. For the past two years especially, we have received letters from some of the leading Glad fans saying some of the new Ellis Originations have produced for them the most wonderful and finest blooms they have ever seen, and that we should use more printers' ink and tell the world about it. However, we have preferred to let the Glads speak for themselves. Our business may grow more slowly that way but it is more substantial. It has stood the stress and strain of evil days, and we now enter into better times with a fine stock of high quality bulbs and well equipped to serve you. We have been glad to send out many gratis bulbs during past years and shall greatly regret if the code should soon prevent our doing so in the future.

Cash or 25% down and balance C. O. D. All orders are received subject to prior sale. Discounts do not apply on special quotations. 1 at 9th of 10 price. 10 at 9 times price per 1. 25 at 4th of 100 rate. Multiply 100 rate by 9 to get price per 1000. (All Prices Quoted f. o. b. Canby, Ore.)

HOW TO CONTROL GLADIOLUS THRIPS

By MERTON G. ELLIS

While people were bemoaning the depression, it remained for tiny insects, not more than a sixteenth of an inch in length and known as thrips, to slip in and do more damage to Glads than the depression ever did. In fact for a year or so it looked as if the Glad business were doomed.

However, in the spring of 1933 it was discovered that thrips have a sweet tooth and since then several sprays have been used which have proved very effective on the growing plants, and very certain in their results, and yet quite inexpensive. We now feel certain that anyone who will carefully follow the simple methods herein given can again grow fine blooms and with no fear of loss from thrips.

And your blooms will be worth more, for a lot of your friends will, no doubt, fail to take the necessary precautions. The thrips may prove to have been a blessing in disguise by doing away with a lot of those blooms which have been selling at five cents per dozen spikes.

The adult thrips are black, with a yellowish or grayish white band at base of their wings. The young are yellowish orange in color. The adults are about a sixteenth of an inch in length. They increase in numbers very rapidly. If you had no good blooms the past season, the florets simply withering up, you probably had thrips.

First, before planting, let us free the bulb of any thrips. The smaller growers will find the use of Naphthalene flakes an inexpensive and most efficient treatment. Use Naphthalene flakes at the rate of about an ounce, or a tablespoonful, to 100 No. 1 bulbs, or their equivalent. If the bulbs are in sacks the flakes may be placed in the sacks with the bulbs. Or if the bulbs are in crates the flakes may be sprinkled over the bulbs and then covered with a newspaper for about three weeks and at a temperature of over 60 degrees. Keeping this amount of warmth will allow the eggs to hatch, so that the resulting thrips may be killed by the fumes from the flakes. Experiment stations have tested this method and say it is sure death to all thrips and their eggs.

As a matter of precaution we are putting Naphthalene flakes in with all bulbs as they are shipped.

It may be safest to remove the Naphthalene flakes after about three or four weeks. Some growers claim the flakes may injure the bulbs, causing some of the blooms to come clubbed and causing the new bulbs to make but few roots. However, we have seen this happen to some varieties in gardens where there were no thrips and where no Naphthalene had been used. Thus far we have seen no bad results from the use of Naphthalene even where it had been left with the bulbs nearly all winter and till planting time.

Large growers may find the use of some fumigant such as Cyanogas more convenient for the treatment of bulbs. This is a dangerous gas and is best used under the supervision of the local inspector.

Others may prefer the lye treatment. The bulbs may be soaked from eight to twelve hours in a solution made of one can of concentrated lye mixed with 20 to 25 gallons of water. To be entirely sure of getting the thrips' eggs it might be necessary to keep the bulbs warm for a few days and give a second brief treatment. The same might be true in use of the Bichloride of Mercury treatment, which consists of the use of an ounce of this to about eight gallons of water, and soaking about four hours.

Some growers have found that by keeping bulbs in winter storage at a lower temperature than 40 degrees the thrips are killed. In order to get the eggs it might be necessary to warm the bulbs for a few days so they would hatch, and then by keeping the bulbs cold again these thrips would also be killed. Hard freezing weather will apparently kill whatever thrips might be trying to winter over in the garden. But in warmer climates this would not hold.

Anyhow, whatever you may do, your neighbors will probably have plenty of thrips and some of them will fly or drift with the wind into your garden, where, if left unmolested, they may soon increase to millions. To be sure of having good blooms you must count on that taking place, and without waiting to see if it is going to take place, you must begin spraying the young plants when they are four to six inches tall. This is most important. If you delay too long you may have no blooms.

Many sprays have been used which did not prove very effective. The first spray that we learned of as being most effective consisted of a pint of black molasses and a teaspoonful of Paris Green mixed in a gallon of water. Some use a larger quantity of Paris Green. However, the Paris Green does not mix well with water and has to be stirred while spraying. We passed this formula on to the florist of the State Hospital. They had a very bad infestation of thrips, the plants being almost black with them. This florist got tired of stirring the Paris Green and hit on what appears to be a much better formula. He just leaves out the Paris Green and puts in that much Arsenate of Lead instead. This dissolves and is a much more deadly poison and is also inexpensive. He cleaned the thrips off in a hurry with it. However, he got at the job too late and the damage was already done. The thrips like to lay their eggs in the leaf sheaths and in the unopened florets and buds. Thus the spray gets only the older thrips. Hence the necessity of beginning the spraying before the spikes show. That way the thrips are killed before they can lay their eggs in the flower buds.

The spraying should be done every week or ten days till the blooms begin to show color. It need be only a fine mist with this spray. Some growers have used other sprays, using considerable force trying to dislodge the thrips, but that is a hard thing to do and we recommend instead the method above given.

We feel absolutely certain that by use of the Naphthalene treatment of the bulbs and the Arsenate of Lead spray for the growing plants that the thrips will do no appreciable damage.

Many growers have reported fine blooms this past season, where the year previous they had no blooms at all. So, folks, the Glad business will soon go on as usual in spite of the thrips.

Mail shipments are insured against loss, except freezing. For that reason, in the winter, we prefer shipping bulbs by express. We use great care to see that only good stock is sent out, but we can assume no responsibility for germination or crops. Should any shipment not open to your satisfaction, please notify us at once. We want only satisfied customers. Feel free to write us. Your success is ours too.

HOW TO CONTROL THRIPS

We are going to include, with each shipment of Glad bulbs, printed directions for the control of thrips. For a couple of years or so it looked as if no remedy could be found for thrips and they were spreading rapidly all over the world; it seemed as if the growing of Glads would soon be a thing of the past. However, simple remedies have recently been discovered which absolutely control the thrips at very small cost. Thus the Glad business is saved and anyone who will follow the directions carefully may again be certain of having good blooms. The careful grower is apt to find a better market than ever.

FOR EXCHANGE

We can often use musical instruments in exchange, as Mr. Ellis is director of a church orchestra. Let us know what you have for exchange and what you would want in bulbs.
